SECOND PRESIDENTIAL DEBATES HELD AT REAGAN LIBRARY

EDITOR'S NOTE

By Stuart Gorin

The leaderships in both the U.S. Senate and the House promised that if re-elected, on behalf of the American people, they would fight the administration on every issue – the Iran nuclear deal, Obamacare, Planned Parenthood, fast-track trade, the ever-growing national debt, homosexual marriage, etc., and etc. But thus far, obviously, both have done nothing. One word to the leaderships: “Meow.”

There are more than 1,300 people on our ever-increasing distribution list, and the newsletter goes to readers not only all over the country, but also across our borders and beyond. Designer Frank Montelione and I hope to see the numbers continue to grow as we pass on information.

We continue to cover activities of the Brevard Republican Executive Committee, Republican clubs in the county, and conservative organizations, so both elected officials and the typical “man-in-the-street” are kept abreast of what is happening at the local, state and national levels.

Since Republicans as well as Conservatives will never agree 100 percent on all issues – for example, differences between Tea Party members and establishment Republicans – we will not necessarily support any writer’s positions, but will present them so you, the reader, can make up your own mind – fair and balanced.

There is a link to this issue at www.thetusk.org, and several recent back issues are available in the archives on the same website.

Against the backdrop of President Ronald Reagan’s actual Air Force 1 that is housed inside his Simi Valley, California, library, 15 Republican presidential hopefuls held their second debate – in two separate sessions – on September 16. The events were sponsored and carried live by CNN.

Despite Reagan’s famed 11th Commandment – “Thou shalt not speak ill of any fellow Republican” – the CNN debate moderators went out of their way to ask panelists to comment on specific statements made by an opponent on a number of issues.

The moderators got their wish, as the candidates then criticized each other on a wide variety of issues, including Middle East policy, Planned Parenthood, immigration, and the electability of political newcomers. These questions triggered confrontations among the candidates, who often interrupted each other. A lot of the criticism was leveled against businessman Donald Trump, who is leading the pack in the political polling.

The so-called “top eleven” candidates in national polling participated in the three-hour main event.

Trump, in response to question about his ability to handle the rigors of the presidency, said his temperament is “very good, very calm.” Regarding immigrants coming into the United States, he said, “this is a country where we speak English, not Spanish.” Trump also said that since he is funding his campaign run with his own personal money, he would not be beholden to wealthy supporters. He added, “If I become president, we will do something really special. We will make this country greater than ever before. We’ll have more jobs. We’ll have more of everything.”

Businesswoman Carly Fiorino, in response to published reports that Trump had criticized her face but said on stage that he had been “misunderstood,” said, “I think women all over this country heard very clearly what Mr. Trump said.” She also said Washington politicians had run up large amounts of debt, and that Trump had done so as well in some of his business ventures. “Why should we trust you to manage the finances of this nation?,” Fiorino asked of the front runner. Regarding the Planned Parenthood debate over the harvesting of fetal tissue, she said the “character of this nation: was involved, and “If we will not stand up and force President Obama to veto this bill, shame on us.”

Former Florida Governor Jeb Bush, responding to charges that his brother – former President George W. Bush – brought the United States into the Iraq war and gave us Barack Obama, said in defense that, “he kept us safe.” But Bush also said he is his “own man.” Critical of Trump’s idea to build a wall on the U.S. southern border to keep out illegal aliens, Bush said, “To build a wall and to deport people, half a million a month, would cost hundreds of billions of dollars. It would tear families apart.” On the subject of Kentucky county clerk Kim Davis’ refusal to sign documents for homosexual couples to marry, Bush said the clerk is sworn to uphold the law, and “we should respect law.”

Retired neurosurgeon Dr. Ben Carson argued for more restraint on the world stage when it comes to placing more “boots on the ground” in the Middle East conflict. Regarding immigration, he said, “After we seal the borders, after we turn off the spigot that dispenses all the goodies so we don’t have people coming in here, including employment, that people who had a pristine record, we should consider allowing them to become guest workers, primarily in the agricultural sphere, because that’s the place where Americans don’t seem to want to work.”

Noting that the political establishment of both parties in Washington is “completely out of touch with the people,” Florida Senator Marco Rubio said he is missing votes in Congress “because I am leaving the Senate; I’m running for president.” He said he has “an understanding of exactly what it is Russia and Putin are doing, and it’s pretty straightforward.” Rubio said Putin – who wants to reposition Russia, once again, as a geopolitical force – considers the fall of the Soviet Union “the greatest geopolitical catastrophe of the 20th century, and now he’s trying to reverse that. He’s trying to destroy NATO.” In a moment of self-deprecation, and recalling that he was mocked for reaching for water during response remarks following the State of the Union address, Rubio commented on California’s water shortage, and holding up a bottle, said, “I made sure I brought my own water.”

Texas Senator Ted Cruz said the single biggest national security threat facing America right now “is the threat of a nuclear Iran. We’ve seen six and a half years of President Obama leading from behind. Weakness is provocative, and this Iranian nuclear deal is nothing short of catastrophic.” He said the deal will only accelerate Iran’s acquiring nuclear weapons, and if elected, he will “rip it to shreds.” Regarding whether to force a shutdown of the government over efforts to cut off funding for Planned Parenthood, Cruz said he would do it, and “we need to stop surrendering and start standing for our principles.”

Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker pointed out that he already has stopped funding Planned Parenthood in his state, reallocating funding to other organizations supporting women’s health issues without covering abortions. Referring to Trump’s former reality television show “The Apprentice” as well as President Obama, Walker said, “We don’t need an apprentice in the White House. We already have one.”

New Jersey Governor Chris Christie, discussing border security, said, “We need to do it with more than just a wall. We need to use electronics, we need to use drones, we need to use FBI, DEA and ATF, and, yes, we need to take the fingerprint of every person who comes into this country on a visa, and when they overstay their visa we need to tap them on the shoulder and say, ‘You have overstayed your welcome. You’re taking advantage of the American people. It’s time for you to go.’ After Trump and Fiorino talked about what they had done in business, Christie drew audience applause when he said the middle-class members of that group “could care less about your careers; they care about theirs.”

Former Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee said the Iran deal threatens the United States, adding “We can’t treat a nuclear Iranian government as if it is just some government that would like to have power. This is a government that for 36 years has killed Americans; they kidnapped Americans; they have maimed Americans. They have sponsored terrorist groups, Hamas and Hezbollah, and they threaten the very essence of Western civilization.” Drawing a parallel to the 1980’s television show “The A Team,” Huckabee said of the group on stage with him, “We have our own A Team. We even have our own Mr. T., who doesn’t mind saying about others, ‘You’re a fool.’”

Referring to the possibility of the government being shut down over funding Planned Parenthood, Ohio Governor John Kasich said such closure would be “a fruitless effort.” He added that if Iran cheats on the nuclear deal, “we slap the sanctions back on. If they help Hamas, and Hezbollah, we slap the sanctions back on. And, if we find out that they may be developing a nuclear weapon, then the military option is on the table.” Imploring the debate moderators to make the discussion more substantive, rather than focused on personal attacks, Kasich said, “If I were sitting at home and watching this back and forth, I would be inclined to turn it off.”

Explaining that he will vote against the Iran agreement because he doesn’t think there is significant leverage, Kentucky Senator Rand Paul said, “It doesn’t mean that I would immediately not look at the agreement, and cut it up without looking to see if whether or not Iran has complied.” He added that the United States should continue to talk with Iran. Paul also pointed out that he made his career “as being against the Iraq war. I was opposed to the Syrian war. I was opposed to arming people who are our enemies.” Regarding the federal government war on drugs, he said he believes it has “a racial outcome,” and he would like to see “more rehabilitation and less incarceration.”

Four additional presidential candidates met earlier in the day in their own debate.

Louisiana Governor Bobby Jindal said Washington Republicans were caving in the face of Democrat pressure. “I am tired of the ‘surrender caucus.’ I am angrier at the Republicans in D.C. than I am at the president,” he said. Jindal also said that too many Republicans back amnesty for immigrants in the country illegally. In his closing statement, he said he is “a doer, not a talker.”

Former Pennsylvania Senator Rick Santorum said the United States should raise the federal minimum wage because a small increase would be valuable to workers. He also said that the only person who benefits from Republican personal attacks on Donald Trump is Democrat candidate Hillary Clinton. Santorum defended Kentucky clerk Kim Davis’ refusal to issue marriage licenses to homosexual couples, and he denounced the federal tax code as being “overly complex.”

Former New York Governor George Pataki said he believed Trump is unfit to be president, and added that if Davis worked for him, he would have fired her. Pataki also said he would not mind higher tax levies on hedge-fund managers. He sought to portray himself as a Republican centrist, and in his closing statement cited his three-term gubernatorial experience.

Explaining his call for more bipartisan cooperation, South Carolina Senator Lindsey Graham spoke of the deals that President Reagan struck with Democrats over a drink. “That’s the first thing I’m going to do as president. We’re going to drink more,” Graham joked. On a more serious note, he called for more immigration in order to increase the American workforce to support aging workers and improve the party’s appeal to Hispanic voters.

Five days before the CNN debates, former Texas Governor Rick Perry became the first presidential candidate to announce he was suspending his campaign, but saying the remaining 16 hopefuls are “a tremendous field – the best in a generation – so I step aside knowing our party is in good hands, and as long as we listen to the grassroots, the cause of conservatism will be too.”

Perry, who trailed in the polls, reduced the size of his campaign earlier in the month, and ran short of funds to pay his staff. Making his announcement at an Eagle Forum event in St. Louis, he said he had no regrets, and “It has been a privilege and an honor to travel this country, to speak with the American people about their hopes and dreams, to see a sense of optimism prevalent despite a season of cynical politics.”

Based on his low standing in the polls, former Virginia Governor Jim Gilmore was the only announced Republican president candidate not to be invited to participate in the debates.

BORELLI KEYNOTES RLC-CEF CONSTITUTION DAY DINNER

Conservative activist, television personality, and author Deneen Borelli told the Republican Liberty Caucus of Central East Florida (RLC-CEF) Constitution Day Dinner audience on September 12 that it is time to remind establishment politicians “they work for us.”

Republican control of Congress, she said, “does not automatically mean less government,” giving as examples the party leaders’ failure to pass legislation abolishing Obamacare, defunding Planned Parenthood, stopping the Iran nuclear deal or curtailing illegal immigration into the country.

Noting that the country is becoming more and more divided, Borelli, a Black member of the Tea Party, said she is tired of the race card constantly being played by Black leaders, including Jesse Jackson, Al Sharpton, President Obama and former Attorney General Eric Holder. People in the Black community are being lied to by these leaders, who tell them they cannot get ahead, she said.

Borelli stressed that America is an exceptional country that got that way through hard work and perseverance. She received a loud ovation when she added, “Unlike Michelle Obama, I have always been proud of my country.”

She closed her remarks by stating: “The country does not guarantee you success. Liberty guarantees you the opportunity to succeed.”

In her book “Blacklash: How Obama and the Left are Driving Americans to the Government Plantation,” Borelli states that the country is at a crossroads and needs to reverse direction. “Nobody wants to be told they’re racist simply because they are too conservative to buy into Obama’s policies,” she writes. “People are too nervous to speak out, so I’m speaking out for them. We need change. We really do. We just can’t afford the kind that Obama and the Washington elites are currently advocating.”

Also on the program, former Green Beret and CIA case officer Todd Wilcox – one of four Republicans seeking to fill the opening U.S. Senate seat of Florida’s Marco Rubio – said he is a candidate because he sadly fears “our constitutional republic is now passing over the horizon.” What will replace it is yet to be seen, he said, but he refuses to sit by and watch it happen.

A first-time political candidate, Wilcox said the Executive Branch “now stonewalls congressional investigations with impunity, blatantly ignoring congressional statutes, and enacts ever encroaching executive actions with total disregard for the rule of law.”

Pointing out that “right or wrong, conservatives have surrendered their most powerful tool because they fear the new entitlement culture will jeopardize their reelection,” he said Congress is now the weakest branch of government.

His campaign website is www.toddwilcox2016.com and his Facebook page is www.facebook.com/toddwilcox2016.

Republican Party of Florida (RPOF) Chairman Blaise Ingoglia told the dinner attendees that nothing is more important than to fix Washington and take back our country, and to do so, “we must deliver Florida to the GOP nominee.” He described GOP as standing for the “Grand Opportunity Party.”

“We want everyone to be successful – no exceptions,” Ingoglia said. He said the party must resolve to recognize past mistakes and embrace the “new future” of a grassroots army and the use of technology.

“There is no need to change our message,” he added, “but we need to change the way to deliver it. The future is in our hands.”

The RLC-CEF’s prestigious Jefferson Cup was presented this year to one of its own – RLC National Chairman Matt Nye. The citizen watchdog and Tea Party organizer, who has been at the vanguard of fighting corruption in Brevard County, said he was honored to receive the cup.

Each year, the organization presents the Jefferson Cup to a person who dedicates himself or herself to core Jeffersonian principles: upholding and supporting limited government, lower taxes, free markets, and personal freedoms and liberties.

Bob White, chairman of the Republican Liberty Caucus of Florida, as well as the RLC-CEF, said in his message to the dinner that the RLC is known as “the Conscience of the Republican Party because we are fearless in holding our party and our elected officials accountable for their actions.”

He added, “We celebrate the Constitution, the Founders, and the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces...But we who love liberty must also recommit ourselves to the values and principles that will uphold liberty and preserve it for our children and our children’s children.”

POSEY DISCUSSES NUMEROUS TOPICS WITH CONSTITUENTS

Meeting with constituents at several organizations’ gatherings in Brevard County during the Congressional recess last month, Representative Bill Posey discussed a variety of topics, including the Middle East, Obamacare, immigration, the national debt and the leadership in Congress.

Posey spoke at the Space Coast Chapter of ACT for America! on August 11, a joint barbeque co-sponsored by the Space Coast Republican Club and the North Brevard Republican Club on August 16, and the Republican Club of Brevard on August 19.

Stressing that Iran poses a threat to our national security and condemns our ally, Israel, he expressed his disapproval that the president took his nuclear deal to the United Nations without presenting it first to Congress, and that the removal of sanctions on the Tehran government gives it millions of dollars for weapons. Posey also disapproved of the side agreements the administration signed with Iran that Congress cannot see, as well as the fact that we can only verify Iran's nuclear buildup at its convenience.

Preaching to the choir, he also said ISIS is a serious threat for which we still have no clear plan or mission. Before we send troops into war, we have to have specific goals, he added.

Regarding Libya, Posey said we have only scratched the surface on Benghazi, and every congressional hearing is yielding more information about the loss of our ambassador and three other Americans on September 11, 2012.

What he had to say about Obamacare was that it is the president's "signature contribution for the destruction of our country."

Regarding the problem of illegal immigration, Posey said those crossing the southern border are carrying guns and drugs, and are involved in human trafficking. Despite what the other side is saying, he added that those crossing are not doing so to pick fruit in order to send money back to their families. Current law requires 700 miles of double fencing along the Mexican border, but in reality only forty miles have been built, Posey said.

He said the ever-climbing national debt is another big threat to the United States, and we need more tax payers than the current number of tax receivers. However, he added that he has always supported a strong national defense budget, and he opposed the sequestration that is having an adverse effect on our military.

Discussing the failed move to replace Speaker of the House John Boehner, Posey said that because of his role in the effort, he is now "in the minority of our majority," and many of his colleagues – who want to remain in the Speaker's good graces – are angry with him. He noted that while Boehner never voted for a tax increase or called for an earmark during his years in the House, he did support the unpopular fast track trade bill, and he failed to defund Obamacare or Planned Parenthood.

"Congress is more leadership driven than membership driven," Posey said.

He also spoke about the realities of Republican and Democrat voting strength in the U.S. Senate – where 60 votes are often required, and there are only 54 Republicans – and how that translates into passing or not passing bills sent from the House of Representatives, or even hearing or not hearing bills, as well as the odds of being able to overturn presidential vetoes.

Showing that there is some hope for the future, Posey said, "the next generation will be more attuned than ours."

SHEA KING CRITICIZES PORT CANAVERAL GULFTAINER LEASE

Addressing the Space Coast Chapter of ACT! FOR AMERICA on September 8, Radio Patriot Andrea Shea King called the recent unanimous decision by the Port Canaveral Commission to award a 35-year lease to Gulftainer – a container terminal operation owned by the United Arab Emirates Jafar family – an "invitation to terrorism."

Quoting the website www.1776channel.com, Shea King said the lease was negotiated in secret – with no open bidding allowed – by Chief Executive Officer Jack Walsh, and approved by the Obama administration without a national security review.

This, she said, was despite Port Canaveral's strategic location and proximity to several of the U.S. government's most sensitive space and defense installations. The administration approval was granted by Treasury Secretary Jack Lew, a long-time associate of former President Bill Clinton, who has ties to the Mideast, Shea King added.

Also, she said, Canaveral is noted for being a cruise ship terminal, and not necessarily a cargo terminal.

She said 1776 Channel reported as well that Gulftainer also operates the Iraq Container Terminal on the Persian Gulf, and allegedly has been shipping weapons through that terminal to two Iranian-backed terrorist militia groups in Iraq. This information, she said, was reportedly leaked to Iraqi media by Iraq General Port Company officials.

It was "unclear" if anyone in the administration had accessed any intelligence reports on the possible Gulftainer involvement in trafficking weapons, Shea King said.

Previously, she said, Gulftainer had attempted to secure a lease at the Port of Jacksonville, close to a submarine base and a naval air station, but that was rebuffed by Port of Jacksonville officials.

RPOF QUARTERLY MEETING HELD IN TAMPA

Republican Party of Florida Chairman Blaise Ingoglia told the RPOF summer quarterly meeting held in Tampa August 28-29 that positive reforms during his first year in office include signing up more than 1,000 volunteers for the 2016 campaign already, hiring bilingual spokesperson Wadi Gaitan on the staff, and launching the "largest ground game on data acquisition this state has ever seen."

He also mentioned all the education and training that's been made available to party leaders as they strive to reelect every Republican state representative and senator.

Ingoglia, who also represents a portion of Hernando County in the State Legislature, said that despite speculation to the contrary in the media, he has never offered himself as a candidate for Speaker of the House, and is not going to do so.

Four Republicans seeking the nomination to compete in the race to replace Senator Marco Rubio addressed the quarterly meeting:

Lieutenant Governor Carlos Lopez-Cantera said Washington candidates and elected officials “are very good at telling you what the problem is; they're very good at pointing fingers...What they're not very good at is getting things done.” He stressed that in Florida, he has been “getting things done, while others only talk about it.”

U.S. Representative Ron DeSantis, an Iraq War veteran and graduate of Yale and Harvard Law Schools, promised to limit the federal government’s size, reduce taxes and regulations and demand a balanced budget amendment to lower the $18 trillion national debt. He also said that he is “sick and tired” of the Obama administration’s treatment of Cuban President Raul Castro and Iran’s Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei better than that of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

U.S. Representative David Jolly said the U.S. national debt “constitutes the greatest threat to our national security,” and he would “stand up” to Washington Republicans, whom he described as “go-along, get along, look the other way” lawmakers who have “gotten us down this fiscal cliff.” He also said he opposed the administration’s positions on immigration, veterans' health care and trade.

Todd Wilcox, a political newcomer and defense contractor who served as a Special Forces and CIA combat veteran, declared Democrat leaders such as President Obama, Hillary Clinton, Elizabeth Warren and Bernie Sanders as enemies of the state “out to fundamentally destroy America,” which they could not have done “without deliberately trying to degrade our capacity and our capability on the world stage.”

BREC NOTES

-- The Brevard Republican Executive Committee (BREC) at its meeting on September 9, viewed a video presentation of two speakers at the 2015 Lincoln-Reagan Dinner – Florida Lieutenant Governor Carlos Lopez-Cantera and CFO Jeff Atwater. BREC member Barry Plans, who filmed the June 5 dinner, created the video.

-- BREC treasurer Linda Fern Davis announced that the 2016 Lincoln-Reagan Dinner will be held on March 11, four days before the Florida presidential preference primary, in order to invite one of the presidential candidates to be the guest speaker.

-- Brevard County state committeewoman Carlie Rogers announced that prior to the 2016 state elections, slate cards will be printed so voters will know which registered Republicans will be on ballots, including candidates in non-partisan races, such as for school board, judges, and municipal seats.

-- BREC vice chairman Rick Lacey urged members to remember Ronald Reagan’s 11th commandment, to do no harm to another Republican. If you must criticize, he said, criticize Democrats, and there are three reasons to do so: 1) their support for the Black Lives Matter movement; 2) their support for Planned Parenthood; and 3) their support for the Iran nuclear deal.

-- Hannah Hughes was introduced as the new Republican Party of Florida Space Coast Regional Field Director.

-- BREC member Connie Smith urged members to sign the e-verify constitutional amendment petition at www.floridiansforeverifynow.org to keep illegal immigrants from taking jobs away from Americans in Florida.

-- BREC member Beth Young announced that the bi-annual Honoring Veterans Military Dinner and Auction will be held November 7, featuring retired Lieutenant Colonel Ronald Frye, who served in Desert Storm, as guest speaker. She said there also will be a tribute to service members killed in action.

-- Four new members were sworn-in as BREC committeemen and committeewomen.

POLITICIANS’ REACTION TO THE CHICKEN CROSSING THE ROAD

Donald Trump: All Mexican chickens who wish to cross this road must submit to a complete background check, and full body search.

JohnMcCain: My friends, the chicken crossed the road because he recognized the need to engage in cooperation and dialogue with all the chickens on the other side of the road.

Hillary Clinton: What difference at this point does it make why the chicken crossed the road?

Bill Clinton: I did not cross the road with that chicken.

Al Gore: I invented the chicken.

John Kerry: Although I voted to let the chicken cross the road, I am now against it! It was the wrong road to cross, and I was misled about the chicken's intentions. I am not for it now, and will remain against it.

Barack Obama: Let me be perfectly clear, if the chickens like their eggs, they can keep their eggs. No chicken will be required to cross the road to surrender her eggs. Period.

THIS AND THAT

BAUER. In one of his “End of Day Reports,” Campaign for Working Families President Gary Bauer wrote of his participation last month in the Alaskan cruise sponsored by “The Weekly Standard.” He said the theme of every question and answer session throughout the week from the 250-some participants was the same: “Why do the Democrats always succeed in advancing their agenda and Republicans have such trouble?” They were sick and tired that we are utterly unable to stop the Democrats from pushing the country to the left, Bauer said, adding that he wished Republican leaders had been on board to listen.

LUTTRELL. The new face of the National Rifle Association is retired Navy SEAL – the nationally recognized “Lone Survivor,” who says in a tv ad that ISIS does not frighten him, and he would not hesitate to use his Second Amendment rights to take on terrorists. In the video, he says: “You hate my freedom, my religion and my country.

You try to control me with violence and intimidation. You think you can muzzle me with fear? Don't ever confuse me with my politicians or my media. I am an American, free-born and free-bred.” Luttrell told Fox News he was “sick and tired” watching America “beat around the bush” about radical Islam.

RONALD REAGAN CLUBS. Brevard County realtor Martin Lamb, who recently returned from a 10-day trip through China, said that while the communist nation does not recognize religion, there are “lots of underground Christians” there. His son, Patrick, is a missionary in China, and has to hold religious services during secret meetings. Lamb told the Ronald Reagan Clubs on August 27 there are 80 million Christians among China’s 1.35 billion population. He said he found it interesting that while China is known for its “one child per family” rule, he still saw kids “all over the place.” Despite a freefall on world markets, Lamb said, Chinese leaders are telling their citizens “don’t sell stocks, they are coming back.” They are also urging people to save to buy a home, since no loans are made in the country. Lamb also showed the club a photo he took of a t-shirt that is being sold in China. It is printed with a picture of President Obama in a Chinese military uniform with the title “Obamaua” – incorporating the name of their revered leader, Mau Tse-tung. China recognized Obama, Lamb said, as one of “the communist leaders in the world.”

ENVIRONMENTAL DESTRUCTION AGENCY. Oops, I mean the “Protection” agency – which last month caused millions of gallons of toxic waste to pollute Colorado’s Animas River – is at it again. This time, the agency is threatening a Wyoming farmer for the “offense” of building a stock pond on his land without asking the exalted EPA for permission. Farmer Andy Johnson received approval from the Wyoming engineer's office for the pond, which was designed to provide water for his livestock, create wetlands and habitat for fish and wildlife, and purify the water that flows through it. But the miffed EPA, which didn’t receive permission first – even though the Clean Water Act explicitly exempts livestock ponds from its jurisdiction – is fining Johnson $37,500 a day for not destroying the pond. The fines are now in excess of $16 million, and the Pacific Legal Foundation is taking the case of this outrageous abuse of power against EPA to court pro-bono.

NINTH CIRCUS. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco – otherwise known as the Ninth Circus – is at it again. The court has overruled the Court of Immigration Appeals, and said an illegal transgendered female should not be deported back to Mexico. The appeals court said transgender people “can be especially vulnerable to harassment and attacks, and shouldn't be equated with gays and lesbians by U.S. immigration officials determining whether to grant asylum.”

SUSAN B. ANTHONY LIST. The pro-life group Susan B. Anthony List on September 3 invited more than 2,000 Democrat congressional staffers to a screening of the Center for Medical Progress’ undercover Planned Parenthood videos. Ironically, fewer than a dozen staffers showed up for the screening, and they were outnumbered by members of the media. The videos have triggered multiple investigations and calls to defund Planned Parenthood of its taxpayer dollars.

GILLELAND. In author Donald Gilleland’s third book, “America: An Exceptional Nation,” he details numerous examples of his explanation. This includes, but it not limited to, America as a food basket to the world and as a security blanket for other nations. It is an effort to show why everyone should believe in American Exceptionalism.

Discussing the book at the New Millennium Conservative Club on August 17, Gilleland explained that he wrote the book in reaction to President Obama’s 2009 press conference in France in which he said America was exceptional “just like other nations,” which meant to him that the president really did not consider America to be “exceptional.”

SCHOOL BAN. There’s a school district in Tennessee – Dickson County by name – that has warned students they will be kicked out of school if they bring a certain banned object on school property. Okay, guns? No. Knives? No. Drugs? No. According to “The Blaze” website, the banned object is our American flag – The Stars and Stripes, Old Glory. It seems the school board officials don't want to "offend" anybody. Know where those officials ought to go?

GET 'EM WHILE THEY'RE YOUNG. In order to "protect" little kids who don't fall into male or female on the "gender spectrum," principal Sam Bass at Miraloma Elementary School in "gay old" San Francisco has done away with gender-specific bathrooms – starting with kindergarteners, reports "Liberty News Now." California law already allows students to use whichever gender bathroom that they identify with – but apparently Miraloma is the first elementary school in the state to do away with male or female altogether. "We changed the signs, we changed the way we teach our students that we don't have boys and girls restrooms, we have restrooms," Bass said.

ESPN. Retired Boston Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling was scheduled to broadcast a Little League game on ESPN. But Schilling, who is known for being a conservative, made the "politically correct mistake" in a tweet of comparing Radical Islam to the Nazis in World War II, so the network punished him by yanking him off it and future assignments. Now, let's see, doesn't ESPN stand for Extremely Socialistic Pandering Nitwits?

BLICKLEY. Addressing the Heritage Isle Republican Club on September 3, Brevard County Property Appraiser Dana Blickley explained that while her office is responsible for identifying and listing every parcel of property in the county, it does not set the assessed value. That, she said, is set by market prices. Regarding the Heritage Isle community – which is expected to be turned over to the residents by the builder later this year – Blickley said that following Florida Statute 193.0235, no tax is assessed on the club house and pool as long as the community remains gated and closed to the public with the exception of some minor events. Even if the residents later purchase the club house from private ownership, that statute will remain in effect, she said, adding that individuals' tax assessments already reflect higher values because the community has the club house and other amenities.

FLORIDA SHOOTING RANGE. The "Sarasota Herald-Tribune" reported in June that two range officials at the Florida Fish and Wildlife Commission's Cecil M. Webb Shooting Range enriched themselves for several years by keeping the monies collected for spent brass that was recycled. These funds were supposed to be used by the state for the Florida Youth Hunt Program. The newspaper pointed out that that "no small sum" was involved, since the range has 100,000 visitors a year, and the commission's inspector general said a criminal investigation was being aggressively pursued against the range officials.

CITIZENS UNITED POLL. More than 4,100 grassroots conservatives took part in a recent Citizens United single question poll on "what is the one issue you would like to see Congress address next?" Border security, answered by 31 percent of the respondents, came in first. The other double digit results were to defund Planned Parenthood, with 16 percent; repeal Obamacare, 15 percent; and a balanced budget amendment, 12 percent. Declaring war on ISIS was fifth, with 8 percent of the votes cast.

STAND YOUR GROUND. The NRA reported in its "America's 1st Freedom" magazine that when two burglars entered the home of an elderly man in Dade County, Florida – who was not named in the item – shots were fired. One intruder died at the scene and the other was taken to a hospital. The magazine said the 77-year-old homeowner was cooperating with the police, who were treating the incident as a "stand your ground" case.

FOOTBALL FAN POWER. The scene was the Friday night football season opener at Brandon High School in Rankin County, Mississippi. The high school marching band had planned to perform the hymn "How Great Thou Art" at halftime, but enter liberal U.S. District Judge Carleton Reeves, who fined the county school district $7,500 for "promoting Christianity during school hours," and ordered it to stop sponsoring prayers at graduations, assemblies, athletic competitions and other school events. So the band's performance was cancelled. But that didn't stop the several hundred parents and students in the stands; they stood and sang the hymn anyway, without musical accompaniment.

GIVE HIM A HAND. The following item comes from radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh's "The Limbaugh Letter": Visiting Nintendo offices to test the company's new "Super Mario Maker" video game, "Business Insider" reporter Ben Gilbert focused on the game's on-screen hand image instead of its technical innovations. Offended because it was a white, female hand, the reporter – whom Limbaugh described as a white crying "white privilege" – wrote, "What if I were, say, a 10-year old black girl? Or a 30-year old Japanese man?" Oops, Limbaugh said, noting that after Gilbert's article was published, Nintendo pointed out that users can easily choose "more options, including various skin tones" for the hand. Limbaugh then concluded, "In fact, one option is a cat's paw – which will no doubt offend the transdog population."

QUOTE OF THE MONTH. This comes from a Black Conservative woman in Missouri, who told Limbaugh that she made and handed out t-shirts with the following message: "Liberalism is what smart looks like to stupid people."

KNOCK KNOCK. We wish we had thought of this first, but it comes to us from "National Review" magazine: "Knock knock. Who's there? Ayatollah. Ayatollah who?"

Ayatollah you I'm not gonna abide by any nuclear agreement."

AN ANAGRAM FOR THE AGES. Take the phrase "an Arab-backed imposter," rearrange all the letters, and lo and behold, you get "President Barack Obama."

QUOTABLE QUOTES

Retired U.S. Navy Admiral James "Ace" Lyons, writing on the Obama administration's planned capitulation in "The Washington Times National Weekly":

"There is no shortage of critics of the recently concluded nuclear agreement that President Obama has reached with the evil Iranian theocracy. All the 'known concessions' by the Obama administration should come as no surprise. Make no mistake — these concessions were not due to incompetence nor the inability to negotiate. They are part of the president's planned agenda to fundamentally transform America by diminishing our stature and credibility. It is another example of his misguided view that America must be humbled for the many 'problems' we have caused throughout the world....This treaty must be rejected. While being challenged throughout the world, the Obama administration continues with its senseless unilateral disarmament of our military forces, thereby jeopardizing our national security. As if disarmament were not enough, our military is being forced to train the military forces of our potential enemies....Compounding the problem is the use of our military as a social engineering laboratory to advance Mr. Obama's political and social agenda. With regard to the promotion of the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender life style, my late friend M. Stanton Evans in his monumental book 'The Theme is Freedom' had it right when he called it a return to the 'pagan ethic.' Clearly, the Obama administration is attacking the American way of life from all aspects. Our open border policy makes absolutely no sense....The corruption of our government agencies, fostered by the Obama administration, should not be overlooked. The selective enforcement of our laws and traditions has lowered Americans' respect and trust of those agencies. However, taken in the aggregate, the fundamental transformation of America is taking place with no objections from Congress and the Supreme Court, which are supposed to prevent illegal and unconstitutional acts by an out-of-control president. Congress and the high court, and for that matter, our military leadership, are complicit in these illegal actions by not faithfully executing their oaths of office....It is now time to take back America."

Foundation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR) President Dan Stein, writing on Donald Trump's immigration plan in "The American Spectator":

"Whatever anyone might think of Donald Trump, his recently unveiled blueprint for immigration reform is a serious plan, worthy of serious consideration. It fundamentally changes the terms of a Barack Obama." long-simmering debate that has consistently failed to reach any sort of resolution by establishing a public interest objective, coupled with meaningful deterrence and enforcement. Three times in the past decade — 2006, 2007, and 2013 — bipartisan immigration "reform" legislation has died in Congress because the plans being proposed were strongly opposed by the American public. Each of those attempts at overhauling our immigration policies were centered on satisfying the demands of millions of people who broke our laws and businesses that wanted even greater access to cheaper foreign labor. Little, if any, attention was paid to the interests of the American people and the impact that mass amnesty and massive increases in immigration would have on workers, taxpayers, or the common good. The best the politicians could offer were promises of future enforcement — the same ones that had been made and broken countless times — and worthless blather about securing the border, even as they provided new incentives for people to cross it. Understandably, the American public vehemently rejected these bipartisan efforts to sell them out. Trump's position paper, 'Immigration Reform that Will Make America Great Again,' represents a real break with past failed attempts to enact immigration reform. First and foremost, it defines a public interest objective for immigration: 'Real immigration reform puts the needs of working people first — not wealthy globetrotting donors... Any immigration plan must improve jobs, wages and security for all Americans,' states the document....There is certainly room for politicians from both parties to quibble with specific details of Trump's immigration reform blueprint. But the basic premise of his proposal — that the policy should protect and serve the best interests of the American people by establishing meaningful deterrence and enforcement against those who break our laws — embodies the core principles of true immigration reform."

Radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh, writing on "The Left Goes Totalitarian" in his "Limbaugh Letter" magazine:

"The left is in full fury against anyone who dares stand in opposition. You see it around you, from the local bakery, to the photo shop, to Supreme Court justices who dissent. All dissent, in fact, must be stamped out. The mob is called out, and the left's most vicious henchmen open up the arsenal of destruction, straight from the sewer. Leftists have been tallying up victories, but they are not satisfied with that. It's not enough that they beat their opponents at the ballot box or in court. In their defeat, the left's opponents must be humiliated, crushed – and converted. And they must be taught never, ever, to dissent again. I have been cataloguing this for years, as the left has gathered strength and power in its long, ruinous march through American institutions....They're totalitarians – they will not brook opposition....Leftists claim they're all about equality, tolerance, fairness. But that's a lie. They're about total domination....As the left continues to attack, you see them grow angrier with each victory. There isn't a sense of triumph – just pent up rage, and a furious focus on the next target....But the truth is, in all of this, the left is making a strategic mistake....Opposition is growing. A vast majority of the American people do not come close to supporting what Planned Parenthood is doing, their horrific 'baby chop shop' business, selling baby body parts harvested during abortions. That kind of cultural rot, that kind of depravity, is an anathema to most Americans....Opposing views are embraced by a majority of the American public. I believe the left knows this, and that's the source of their fury. I think the left realizes they're a minority, and that any gains they've made are highly vulnerable....So be of good cheer. Their totalitarian tactics are proof that they fear us; and that they know they do not control the American people's hearts."

Republican presidential candidate Dr. Ben Carson, writing on the "Black Lives Matter" movement in "USA Today":

The idea that disrupting and protesting Bernie Sanders speeches will change what is wrong in America is lunacy. The 'BlackLivesMatter' movement is focused on the wrong targets, to the detriment of blacks who would like to see real change and to the benefit of its powerful white liberal funders using the attacks on Sanders for political purposes that mean nothing for the problems that face our community. The notion that some lives might matter less than others is meant to enrage. That anger is distracting us from what matters most. We're right to be angry, but we have to stay smart. Of course, the protesters are right that racial policing issues exist and some rotten policemen took actions that killed innocent people. Those actions were inexcusable and they should be prosecuted to deter such acts in the future. But unjust treatment from police did not fill our inner cities with people who face growing hopelessness. Young men and women can't find jobs. Parents don't have the skills to compete in a modern job market. Far too many families are torn and tattered by self-inflicted wounds. Violence often walks alongside people who have given up hope....Teaching is a tough job and thank God there was a teacher who convinced me that I was not dumb, but our schools are failing and we have no power to abandon them. The actions of rogue police officers take black lives one at a time. Our public school system has destroyed black lives not in the ones and twos, but in whole generations. The schools don't teach and our children don't learn. Too many public schools are controlled by teachers unions focused more on the convenience and compensation of adults rather than the education of children who started out far behind. Their failures don't kill as quickly, but they do kill as surely as a bullet....We should have a talk with the Democratic Party. Let's tell them, we don't want to be clothed, fed and housed. We want honor and dignity. We don't want a plan to give us public housing in nice neighborhoods. We want an end to excuses for schools that leave us without the means to buy our own houses where we choose to live. We want the skills needed to compete, not a consolation prize of Section 8, Food Stamps and a lifetime of government paperwork. Finally, we need to go over to the Republican Party. We need to tell them they have ignored us for too long. They need to invite us in and listen to us. We need to communicate and find a different way."

Rick Manning, president of Americans for Limited Government, writing on global warming alarmists in "Investor's Business Daily":

"Global warming alarmists must be shaking their heads in disbelief. Just when they felt they had the stars aligned to push their anti-capitalism/free enterprise agenda on the international stage and claim the power that they crave, the climate and scientists have begun to turn against them. Sydney, Australia, has snow for the first time since 1836....In other news, the Big Island of Hawaii had snowfall in July. Not to be outdone, the Sierra Nevada mountain range in California also had snowfall this July. Antarctica set a new record for ice extent in 2014 and continues to set records for how much ice covers the oceans surrounding this southern hemisphere continent as 2015 progresses. And to confuse the science-is-settled-on-global-warming crowd even further, some solar scientists are now projecting that due to changes in the sun's cycles, the earth is likely to suffer from what is known as a "Little Ice Age" starting in 2030, as the heat-giving star settles into a very rare pattern of inactivity. Imagine their consternation at learning that the sun actually plays a role in the earth's temperature....Yet the Obama administration pushes on with their attempts to destroy coal-fired electric generation, as well as the misguided taxpayer funding of bird- and bat-destroying wind farms and regulatory schemes intended to hamstring oil-based domestic energy production. The reason is simple. The global warming agenda is not about the planet. Otherwise, world environmental do-gooders would be focused upon the world's worst polluting nation, China, rather than giving them a pass. The head of the U.N. Framework Convention on Climate Change, Christiana Figueres, readily admits that the real climate change agenda has nothing to do with the environment, but instead is about redistribution of wealth. "This is probably the most difficult task we have ever given ourselves," she says, 'which is to intentionally transform the economic development model, for the first time in human history'....The only way to beat this global economic coup d'état is to beat them politically with the first step being to stop taxpayer funding for those who plot our national demise at the Environmental Protection Agency, the United Nations and elsewhere."

Retired Army General Jerry Curry, writing on East is East and West is West on the NewPatriotsBlog website:

"Many years ago, I attended the Infantry Officer Advanced Course at Fort Benning, Georgia. Probably ten percent of the students attending that ten month course of instruction were from foreign countries. For about half of the course my tablemate was an Arab. We studied together, completed homework assignments together, got to know each other's families and generally enjoyed each other's company. Part of that time we students were immersed in reading about, researching and discussing wars and problems of the Middle East. By this time my Arab classmate and I had, I thought, become close friends. A question popped into my mind, and without evaluating it, I said...'Each time you Arabs start a war with Israel, they beat your socks off. Why don't you learn your lesson and quit making war on them?'...My Arab officer friend didn't get angry. He didn't even think before replying...'You are absolutely right. Each time we attack the Israelis they whip us. But have you noticed that with each loss we get better. We get whipped not as badly as in the war before.' Then he got a faraway look in his eyes, pounded on the table and said, 'Sometime in the next thousand years, we will win!' Up until then I'd never thought in terms of a thousand years....During the 1st Gulf War, U.S. and Arab forces fought side by side and some of the officers became close friends. When the war ended in victory there was a celebration in the Officer's Club with congratulations all around. A lot of handshaking and hugging was going on. It was a time of displaying real brotherly love. Seeing this, one of the senior Arab generals felt the need to set the record straight. 'Look,' he said to a small cluster of American generals, 'We've fought together and some of us have died together. I know you feel that makes us brothers. But that's not the way it is in my world...There will be no tomorrow for us jointly. No matter how much you have helped my country and you came and helped us when we desperately needed your help and no matter how friendly you feel toward us, we are still Muslims and you are still Christians. That means that in our eyes, we can never be brothers. I'm sorry, but to us, you will always be Infidels!'....Also, I learned what Kipling meant when he wrote: 'East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet.'"

Author Don Gilleland, writing on abortion in "Florida Today":

"Abortion is a killer issue that is once more receiving enormous attention from the news media. It raises its controversial head center stage in almost all political discussions about health care programs. Progressives want contraceptive options and abortions covered in the government's health care plan, while conservatives want no federal money spent on abortions at all....Many people view abortion in absolute terms. They believe it is either infanticide or a woman's right to decide about her own body. In truth, it may be somewhere in between, because there is more at stake than a woman's body. Abortion is an intensely personal issue about which each side claims to be on the side of the angels. Notice that everyone is for something and no one is against anything; thus, we have such catch phrases as pro-life and pro-choice. Some people believe women should have complete control of their own bodies, concluding that unborn babies are nothing more than an insensate nonviable collection of human tissue that needs no representation in these discussions. Of course, a sonogram early in pregnancy will dispel this myth, as does microsurgery performed on babies still in the womb. A fetus is a distinctly separate individual with its own blood type and DNA, and the question that must be addressed is: Who speaks for the baby....The current controversy over Planned Parenthood allegedly selling baby body parts ought to confirm the reality that a fetus is a baby, else how could it have marketable parts, such as heart, liver, spleen and kidneys. I suspect the abortion issue will not be resolved any time soon, but the evolving public sentiment seems to be migrating toward pro-life, despite Roe v. Wade. Incidentally, abortion is not mentioned anywhere in the Roe v. Wade precedent. A woman's right to have a legal abortion was a judicial interpretation of the intent of Roe v. Wade, which was actually about a woman's right to privacy."

Republican National Committee Co-Chairman Sharon Day, writing on Republican women and Hillary Clinton in the RNC "Grassroots Quarterly":

"As the race for the White House heats up, the Republican Party knows what we're up against: the old Clinton Machine. But we know that the facts are on our side, and as we make our case to female voters – in fact as we make our case to all voters – we will continue to hold Hillary Clinton accountable for her secrecy and her scandals. We will make sure, as the messengers and leaders of our party, that voters know the facts that define Hillary Clinton. Facts like Hillary Clinton paid the women on her Senate staff less than the men; Hillary Clinton's party chairwoman said there should be zero protections for an unborn child. Zero; Hillary Clinton's Foundation raked in millions of dollars from countries with terrible records of violating women's rights; Hillary Clinton's State Department failed to label Boko Haram – a group that would later kidnap hundreds of innocent Nigerian girls – a terrorist organization. These are the facts. And Americans can decide whether Hillary is standing up for women or if she is letting all women down. We know what the Democrats are going to do. They will go back to their tired playbook of treating women like single-issue voters. But while Democrats have been busy stereotyping women, Republican women have been busy breaking barriers, and yes, even glass ceilings. We are the Party of the nation's first Latina Governor – New Mexico Governor Susana Martinez; We are the Party of the nation's youngest governor – South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley; We are the Party of the first female combat veteran in the Senate – Iowa Senator Joni Ernst; and the first female fighter pilot in American history – Arizona Congresswoman Martha McSally; We are the Party of the nation's youngest congresswoman in history – New York Congresswoman Elise Stefanik. And the list goes on. Because this Party – our Republican Party – makes history by electing strong, principled women to lead America.”

THOUGHTS TO PONDER

“It's not how liberal the media are. The question is: How much are they believed, how much are they trusted? You're never going to stop the press from being left-wing. You can't do a thing to stop that. But what you can do is expose their lack of credibility. You have to do it every single day. That's what motivates me, because it works.”

“Among the many memorable sights and sounds (and smells) of Occupy Wall Street was the young man who was very eager to speak to me about derivatives trading, which, he promised me, was positioned to sucker-punch the world economy even more brutally than the mortgage bubble had. He seemed to have a great deal of information at his command: The derivatives market was so many trillions of dollars and was inadequately regulated in such-and-such a way, etc. Listening to him speak for a bit, I told him I had only one question that I'd like him to answer: ‘What's a derivative?’ Sputter, stutter, stammer, hem and haw. He had no idea. It was something Wall Street types did, and it was . . . bad.”

“When five largely unrepresentative and unaccountable people can decide to impose their moral values on a nation of 320 million, we really are not a nation of laws, but a nation of men....Anthony Kennedy decided to insert his will and morality into the discussion and shut up everyone else. He thought he could shut down the conversation. He only made it angrier.”

And

“Hillary Clinton, to distract everyone from the ongoing criminal investigation against her, has gone after Jeb Bush over ‘anchor babies.’ Clinton declared on twitter, ‘They're called babies.’ This is a woman who defends an organization that cuts open a child's head, while the child is still living with a beating heart, to take the child's brain.”

“In a reckless and potentially illegal act of paranoia, Mrs. Clinton decided to keep her emails private —and that the rules didn't apply to her. Since her scheme was discovered, she has wounded herself with misleading statements or flat-out lies, putting herself in legal jeopardy, diminishing her standing with voters, and damaging her reputation.”

Doctors at the CDC say a new disease that has already infected over half of the United States is anticipated to continue to spread. Symptoms include severe scalp pain from pulling one's hair while watching the president pander to Muslim terrorists; uncontrolled heartburn from swallowing the fact that he was elected twice; and extreme hunger due to vomiting from seeing terrorists murder innocent people. The disease is called Post Islamic Stress Trauma with Apologetic Whitehouse Fatigue, or PIST-AWF.

You can say a lot of things about President Obama, but you have to give him credit for one thing: the man took office less than seven years ago, and in that time he managed to take a country that was in poor economic condition, a country that was weak and tired of wars, a country that lost its respect by a significant part of the international community, and single-handedly re-establish its position as one of the most influential, prosperous and powerful countries in the world.

Now if he could help the United States the same way he helped Iran
